The screenshot shows a website header with a logo on the left and navigation links: HOME, BLOG, JOBS, PRO RESOURCES, and DASHBOARD. Below the navigation is a button that says "GROW YOUR FREELANCE BUSINESS". The main content area features a laptop displaying a Slack interface on the left. To the right of the laptop, the heading reads "The free Slack community for freelance writers". Below this heading, there are two paragraphs of text: "The Peak Freelance Slack group is a global community of freelance writers. We come together to share jobs, ask questions, and make freelance friends." and "The best part? It's totally free to join." Below this is a section titled "Need-to-knows" with a sub-heading "To keep the community high quality and spam-free, there are a few need-to-knows before we get started:". This is followed by two bullet points: "While we love all freelancers, this is a community specifically for writer/content strategists." and "This free community differs from our All Access membership, which grants you access to our member's portal. This portal is jam-packed with templates, workshops, courses, and monthly events to help freelance writers take their businesses to the next level." At the bottom of the section is a quote: "Joining Peak Freelance was hands down the best thing I did for my career. The ROI I've had since I joined in 2020 has been amazing. Being able to bounce ideas around with other freelancers is so valuable." attributed to Holly Stanley.
